THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW SOUTH WALES

The University of New South Wales commenced as the New South Wales University of Technology in 1949. It became the University of New South Wales in 1958. The University is commonly known as UNSW or by its registered business name, UNSW Sydney.

From 1951 the University administered on behalf of the Department of Technical Education a number of diploma programs leading to the award of Associateship of Sydney Technical College. The programs were withdrawn in 1959.

In 1951 a University College was established at Newcastle. It became the University of Newcastle in 1965. In 1954 a University College was established at Broken Hill. It ceased operations in 1984. In 1962 a University College was established at Wollongong. It became the University of Wollongong in 1975.

In 1967 the Faculty of Military Studies was established at the Royal Military College, Duntroon, in the Australian Capital Territory. In 1981 the University College at the Australian Defence Force Academy was established. The Academy was opened in 1986 and the activities of the Faculty of Military Studies were absorbed into the University College, known as UNSW Canberra at ADFA.

In 1990 the former St George Institute was amalgamated with the University. Also in 1990 the former City Art Institute was amalgamated with the University and is now known as UNSW Art & Design. St George Institute was an institute of the Sydney College of Advanced Education from 1982 to 1989. City Art Institute was an institute of the Sydney College of Advanced Education from 1982 to 1987 and an institute of The New South Wales Institute of the Arts from 1988 to 1989. In 1982 the Alexander Mackie College of Advanced Education was disestablished and the St George Institute and City Art Institute were established within the Sydney College of Advanced Education.
